SCHOOL LEARNING SUPPORT COORDINATOR PRESENCE IN 265 SCHOOLS

What it means for schools and communities

A School Learning Support Coordinator presence is being established across 265 public schools in New South Wales.

Under this initiative specialist teacher positions are being established in 40 school communities comprising 265 regular schools, to support students with complex additional needs in learning and their teachers.

These specialist teachers will be known as School Learning Support Coordinators. They will help classroom teachers to respond to the specific additional learning needs of students who are experiencing difficulties. These additional teacher positions will supplement existing resources available to schools.

School Learning Support Coordinators will receive specialist training to work with students with complex additional needs such as those who have Autism, behaviour problems, language and communication problems along with those who have motor coordination difficulties. These coordinators will also provide professional support and guidance for regular classroom teachers working with these students.

School Learning Support Coordinators will receive 110 hours of online specialist training in the areas of:

- Curriculum access and outcomes planning
- Autism
- Language and communication needs
- Behaviour
- Motor coordination difficulties.

The School Learning Support Coordinators will work together within their local communities of schools to establish training and support networks and sharing of resources and expertise.

Included in these Communities of Schools are a number of Schools for Specific Purposes.
