

Ideas for teacher librarians

If you want to do the rap with a class, but don't have much time, or need some ideas, try, some of the following:

display the posts in the library; young students love to see them on the wall, especially if their names are mentioned choose the most suitable activities for your class for each rap point use an IWB or a data projector so the class can see the rap, read posts & jointly construct responses ask students to come in at lunch time to post the response collaborate with teachers to teach some of the rap in normal class time and you continue when the class comes to the library consider doing the rap to complement a reading café or literature circle print off the syllabus outcomes, rap points, and activities; tick, sign & date for your program
